

Día de Muertos

The interdisciplinary field of Cognitive Science advances our knowledge of the brain, behavior, systems design, and computation by embracing the skills and expertise of people from multiple communities and cultures. Throughout the year, students, faculty, and staff in the department will be sharing and celebrating their cultures with the larger UCSD community through our new Cognitive Science Cultural Celebration Series.

We will be kicking off the year with a celebration of Día de Los Muertos (Day of the Dead).

This Mexican holiday is traditionally observed October 31 - November 2nd, and during the holiday people celebrate the lives of loved ones who have passed away. Some Chicana members of the Cognitive Science faculty and staff wish to share this warm and festive holiday by creating a space in the Cognitive Science Building first floor main entryway for our community to post pictures, drawings, and warm memories of loved ones who have passed.

The entryway will be filled with paper marigolds as part of the celebration, and those who wish to celebrate privately can feel free to take potted or silk marigolds home with them.

Please come by the Cognitive Science Building first floor main entryway to share and celebrate with us October 31st-November 1st.
